DEMOCRAT PARTY MAY SEE CHANGE ON LONG CUSTOM

McAdoo Forces Passive on Proposed Abrogation of Majority Rule

SMITH TO FIGHT IT

McAdoo Forces Not Claiming Fight For Change in Custom

(By the Associated Press)

NEW YORK; June 17—Possibility of abrogating the time honored two-thirds rule governing the nomination of candidates by the national Democratic convention continues today to be the most discussed topic among leaders and delegates already assembled.

It is generally believed that unless a move for the discontinuance of the rule comes from McAdoo forces, the procedure which has been followed in the Democratic gatherings since the days of Andrew Jackson, will be followed in the coming election.

The arrival tomorrow of William G. McAdoo to lead his convention forces, may result in a definite announcement as to his attitude.

The sentiment of McAdoo men already here on this question was described last night by Judge David Ladd Rockwell, Mr. McAdoo's manager, as follows:

"The friends of Mr. McAdoo did not start the agitation for the abrogation of the two-thirds rule. Geo. E. Brennan is entitled to that distinction. McAdoo men are merely passive about it. We shall not object if Mr. Brannon starts a drive to do away with the rule which everyone admits is archaic and out of harmony with the spirit of democracy. The republicans operate under the majority rule."

Although no definite statement has come from the Smith camp as to their attitude on this question, it is asserted by his followers that he prefers to abide by the present procedure and his forces are optimistic as to their chances to defeat any attempt to bring about a change.

UNCERTAINTY CONTROLS CONVENTION AT ST. PAUL

ST. PAUL; June 17—Clouds of uncertainty hovered over the national Farmer-Labor-Progressive convention today before the time for the opening session and rumors ranging from a harmonious three or four days deliberation to an open split with either the union labor or farmer group or representatives of the communists organization bolted.

Pre-convention facts showed these two elements in a bitter struggle over control as they split rather definitely on the question, yesterday, of organization of a national party with a ticket to present to the voters. The communists favored that course but the more consecutive adhered to the plan for convention endorsement of Senator La Follette as a possibility and attempt a coalition with the July 4 Cleveland conference. Minority and majority reports of the committee on arrangements embodying divergent ideas will be presented to the convention and fought out on the floor.

TWO UNMASKED BANDITS HOLD UP MARLAND BANK

(By the Associated Press)

PONCA CITY, June 17.—Two unmasked bandits held up the state bank at Marland at 9:30 this morning and escaped with cash estimated at about $9,000. Cashier W. C. Brengle and Miss Cole, a bookkeeper, were in charge of the bank. Two customers were in the lobby.

The robbers described as a large man and a small man, ordered all into the vault and then locked the door.

As soon as Cashier Brengle succeeded in releasing himself and the others he spread the alarm but the bandits had escaped. They are believed to have driven out from the city in a high powered car. The small man is described as being dressed in blue overalls. A good description was not obtained of the large man.

TWENTY PERSONS DROWNED WHEN MAIL STEAMER SINKS

(By the Associated Press)

CHRISTIANA, Norway; June 17—Twenty persons, mostly women and children, were drowned when the Norwegian mail steamer Haukon Jarl sank yesterday immediately after a collision occurred in Vestfjord between the Lofoten islands and the Norgrean mainland.

Mercury Races Up To 101 Again For Siege on Citizens

The playful mercury, which runs the scale of seasons, slid over the hundred mark again today as Ada citizens gasped for breath in the hottest June for a number of years.

Settling at 101 degrees at 2 o'clock this afternoon, the temperature tied the reading of last Saturday and is marked down as another hottest day of the year.

The high berth of the mercury today follows a temporary respite Sunday and Monday when the mercury settled down to 98 and 95 degrees. Residents generally could not distinguish the decline of the mercury and vouched the two days were hottest of the season.

JEWELL TELLS OF MERITS OF STATE

Urge Consideration of Student as Asset in Wealth Of Oklahoma

Dr. J. R. Jewell, dean of the department of education of the University of Arkansas, was the principal speaker at the Lions luncheon today at noon. Dr. Jewell is delivering a series of lectures to the students of the East Central State Teachers College while in the city. He is generally considered one of the greatest educators in the United States.

Dr. Jewell often compared the resources of Arkansas and Oklahoma, sometimes to the credit of one state and then the other. He would give an illustration of the superiority of the newer commonwealth and then follow by a knockout blow on something else.

The main resources of the states are oil and other minerals, which are being depleted as used; agriculture, and the soil is being mined and washed away; industry and the machines wear out; and boys and girls who do not wear out and the education and training of which constitute the greatest resource of either state.

In resources, with the probable exception of oil, Arkansas leads Oklahoma except in training the growing generations. Oklahoma is far ahead educationally, but Arkansas is starting on a program that ought to carry it to greater heights.

Oklahoma has the greatest percentage of residents in school in the state than any other state in the union.

Dr. Jewell paid a glowing tribute to the East Central State Teachers College. He says that in the East and North, the East Central College is looked upon as the most efficient educational institution in the state. Dr. Jewell was the guest of Dr. A. Linscheid.

Robert S. Kerr spoke briefly in favor of the Y. M. C. A. work. Lion S. M. Shaw is one of the state directors of the organization.

Rev. C. C. Morris called attention to the Chautauqua which starts here tomorrow.

Announcement was made that Hon. E. Bee Guthrey, secretary of the State Highway Commission, will be here Friday, will be given a dinner by the Lions and will address a mass meeting at 8 o'clock in the evening at the Memorial Hall.

POLITICIANS INVITED TO FOURTH OF JULY PICNIC

The Norman Howard post, American Legion will extend time for candidates for public office if they take the stump on July Fourth to express their views on politics in general and their aspirations for office.

A special stand will be constructed and politicians are invited to address the Fourth of July picnic crowds in the speaking program that will last several hours of the day.

Lieutenants believe the open invitation to politicians will bring the first real test of political strength in the county and will open the barage of political campaigns in the county.

No restrictions are held for candidates. The invitation is positively open to all who care to take the stump on the occasion. An effort will be made to locate the platform in a cool spot and provide a comfortable place for the listeners.

Other features of the Legion's Fourth of July picnic will be the swimming contests in the Legion pool. Several prizes will be offered to winners of the contests.

The possibility of other entertainment features was announced by Ralph Waner, who has charge of the entertainment end of the program. Joe Allen will have charge of the sale of booths and concessions for the picnic.

HERRIOT DECLARES NO EVACUATION OF RUHR

(By the Associated Press)

PARIS; June 17—A declaration of Premier Herriot's cabinet submitted to parliament today affirms that the Ruhr will not be evacuated until guarantees provided in the Dawes report have been set up.

Other features of the declaration include a pronouncement for restoring normal relations with Russia.

The declaration calls for prompt ratification of the remaining treaties signed at the Washington armament conference and by the international labor convention and the conclusion of peace with Turkey.

The ministry stands for the disarmament of Germany by the allies and as soon as possible by the League of nations. It would find a solution of the problem of France security through guarantee pacts in control of the League of Nations.

NAVY TO PAY ITS RESPECTS TO DEAD

Civilians to Join in For Last Respects to Victims of Explosion

(By the Associated Press)

SAN PEDRO, Calif.; June 17—Civilians will join with the navy at funeral services at Trona Field here today in paying a final tribute to the 48 men killed last Thursday in a gun turret explosion aboard the battleship Mississippi.

Escorted by armed sailors, more than 4 bodies were taken late yesterday to the temporary chapel where memorial services will be conducted with full naval honors.

Massed bands came ashore and went through a rehearsal of the ceremonies.

Funeral rites for Lieut. Thomas E. Sellers were conducted yesterday at Long Beach.

Sessions of the naval court of inquiry investigating the explosion will close this afternoon aboard the hospital ship "Relief" where 12 enlisted men injured in the blast will be asked to tell their stories of the tragedy.

F. J. Rynes, turret captain, who is said to have been in a position to see exactly what happened in the death but early today surgeons said first man questioned. For several days he hovered between life and death but early today surgeons said his recovery was assured and would probably be able to testify briefly from his cot.

Many Shot at Leesville

NEW ORLEANS, June 17—One negro is dead, one white man seriously wounded and several negroes badly hurt as the result of a wholesale shooting at Leesville, La., late yesterday when negroes attempted to liberate two negro prisoners, according to word received from Leesville.

When evaporated, a ton of water from the Red sea yields 173 pounds of salt; the same volume of water from the Atlantic oceans gives only 81 pounds.

Brothers Wanted in Oklahoma Believed Heading For Mexican Border

(By the Associated Press)

FORT WORTH, Tex., June 17—Officers of surrounding counties, especially south of Fort Worth, were watching automobiles and trains this morning in an effort to arrest two youths who late yesterday are said to have shot to death Joe P. Morgan, deputy sheriff of Muskogee, Okla.

The shooting occurred near the western edge of Tarrent county when the officer and a companion were returning the youths to Muskogee. They were accused of stealing an automobile. The boys riding in the back seat of the car seized a revolver from Morgan and shot him through the head. Then they forced the other officer to drive the automobile into a thicket where Morgan's body was hidden.

The body of Morgan will be sent to Muskogee for burial.

The two fugitives are expected to head for the Mexican border and every highway is being watched.

MUSKOGEE, June 17.—On the theory that Dave and Bill Lawrence who last night shot Joe Morgan, Muskogee deputy sheriff, to death on a country road near Fort Worth, Texas, might head for their Oklahoma haunts if closely pursued, the Muskogee sheriff's office today broadcast photographs and descriptions of the men all over northern and Southern Oklahoma.

CONFESSED SLAYERS CLAIM --
FRANKS MURDER MYSTERY

(By the Associated Press)

CHICAGO; June 17—Nathan Leoold, Jr. and Richard Loeb, awaiting trial on charges of kidnapping and slaying Robert Franks which they have admitted, declared the real story of the boy's death never will be told, although previously they maintained they kidnapped and killed for a thrill and $1,000 they demanded as a ransom, said today's Chicago Tribune and Examiner.

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 17.—An alternative writ of mandamus to compel W. C. McAlester to file the name of King Fitzpatrick for the lieutenant governorship was granted by the Oklahoma county district court today. The final argument will be heard Thursday.

MUSIC DEALERS FIND BUSINESS SLACK NOW

Music hath its charm—but so does the auto and as a consequence musical instruments and sheet music loses its demand during the warm months of the summer.

Music dealers maintain the sales on instruments and sheet music fall off despondingly during the summer months, with only the prescribed "Etude" or some other instructive sheet for forced practice despite the summer months.

With the great outdoors welcoming music lovers during the summer months and the hot sultry evenings if spent at home are sufficient to lure erstwhile musicians from their consecrated study to more comfortable pastimes.

Music dealers declare that phonograph records are the only subjects of music to find sale during the summer and generally the demand ends with jazz records.

DOMESTIC STORM CLAIMS VICTIMS

Toll of Three Lives Exacted
In Two Separate Family
Affairs

(By the Associated Press)

BRISTOW, June 17.—A toll of three lives was exacted here today as the result of two separate domestic difficulties. Marie Williams, 1, and Alfred Williams, 3, were found drowned in a lake near here. Mrs. J. W. Williams, their mother, was rescued from the lake by an unidentified man. She told police she tossed the babies to their death, they reported.

Lee Conner, 35, an oil field worker, died of a bullet wound in his head. Mrs. Conner told police her husband committed suicide because of a love affair.

When police went to the Williams home they found a message on a dresser stating that the bodies of Mrs. Williams and her children would be found in the lake.

A third child of Mrs. Williams died police she was standing on the bank of the lake and watched her mother toss Alfred into the water and then jump in with Marie in her arms, they said.

The rescuer could not save the children, he told police. His name was Love, they said.

Williams is a railroad worker here. He has not been questioned yet, police said.

Conner took his life because of jealousy, his wife told police.

NO ARREST MADE IN ROBBERY OF FASHION

The theft of $500 worth of dresses and silk finery from the exclusive quarters of the Fashion, women's store, remained a mystery today as receiving a bid from the tourists, while southern resort centers, such as Galveston, receive their usual amount of attention from tourists.

Special rates offered over nearly all railroad lines make traveling inexpensive and consequently it appeals to many people who take advantage of excursion rates on business trips.

Employes in local railroad offices expect the volume of excursion ticket purchases to come during the months of July and August, the most uncomfortable months Ada is called on to bear.

NEW FRENCH PRESIDENT TO FORCE GERMAN PEACE

(By the Associated Press)

PARIS; June 17 Gaston Doumergue, France's new president, sent his first message to parliament today declaring that Germany, before the Dawes report was put into effect, must prove her good faith. Such proof he insisted, must come from facts, not mere engagements without assurance of fulfillment.

Citizens Urged to Aid Administration In Health Campaign

Citizens of Ada are urged to assist the city administrations in its efforts to battle malaria and other dangerous health menaces caused by unsanitary conditions.

Mayor Somer Jones requests all citizens, who have tin cans, garbage or other waste substance which would breed unsanitary conditions be prepared for the visit of garbage wagons during the week.

Five wagons have been placed in service for the week in an effort to eradicate all breeding places of flies and mosquitoes. Citizens are urged to assist the administration and collect all waste substance for the visit of the garbage wagons.

Mayor Jones considers this one of the important steps in ridding the city of unhealthful conditions.

Rivalry Between Chicago City Police and Federal Law is Conflicting

CHICAGO; June 1—The discovery at Joliet of 25 sacks of partly looted registered mail taken in the holdup of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul fast train Thursday night, 32 miles north of Chicago, clears up the mystery surrounding the most daring train robbery in the railroad history. A. E. Germer, chief postoffice inspector here, said today.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY.

FEAR THOU NOT; for I am with thee; be not dismayed; for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee, yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness.—Isaiah 41:10.

LOWDEN NOT THE FIRST

There seems to be a widespread impression that the office of Vice President has seldom or never been declined once a candidate has proved acceptable to a caucus or nominating convention. The truth is, that there have been at least five instances of declinations of the second office which are or should be known.

The first instance goes back over a hundred years, to 1812, and has been generally overlooked. To quote from the American Historical Review (October, 1916, p. 94):

"On Monday, May 18, 1812, less than a month after Vice President Clinton's death in office at the age of 73 years, a Congressional caucus named James Madison for a second term in the Presidency, and cast a majority of its eighty-two votes for John Langdon of New Hampshire as Vice President. Ten days later (May 28) Langdon, writing from his home in Portsmouth, being past 70 years old and disinclined to assume further responsibilities, declined the honor, * * * A second caucus held in Washington on June 8, and gathered for the single purpose of filling the vacancy, named Elbridge Gerry of Massachusetts for the place."

The following four instances are pretty well known:

1. A convention of the Abolition Party held in Warsaw, N. Y., on November 13, 1839, nominated Thomas Earl of Pennsylvania as Vice President on a ticket with James G. Birney of New York. On Earl's declination of the nomination Francis Lemoyne, likewise of Pennsylvania, was substituted.

2. The second instance, that of Silas Wright of New York, is famous. Nominated to run as Vice President with James K. Polk by the Baltimore Convention in May, 1844, he promptly declined the honor—chagrined at the failure of his friend, Van Buren, to obtain the chief place. Wright's substitute was George M. Dallas of Pennsylvania.

3. In the Utica Convention of Free-Sailors of June 22, 1848, General Henry Dodge of Wisconsin was named for the Vice Presidency on the ticket with Martin Van Buren. Dodge declined the place and was succeeded by Charles Francis Adams of Massachusetts.

4. A more recent instance occurred in 1860 when Benjamin Fitzpatrick of Alabama, nominated on the first ballot at the Baltimore Convention as Vice President with Stephen A. Douglas, declined the honor. The National Committee then nominated Herschel V. Johnson of Georgia in Fitzpatrick's place.

PUNISHMENT CERTAIN.

News dispatches indicate that some of the robbers of the mail train near Chicago a few days ago are under arrest and the others may be apprehended at any time. No doubt sooner or later they will be brought to justice.

The law sometimes seems slow and is slow. Officers are oftentimes inefficient or dishonest. But sooner or later the man who violates the laws of God and man will be punished. Even he who is not punished in a physical way often suffers the torture of the damned.

The business of crime is a poor business. When one man or set of men believe they can beat the rest of society by doing what that other part has decided is wrong, they are foolish in the extreme. Crime will out sooner or later and the criminal will suffer.

The American airmen are gradually working towards the half way mark, being now in the neighborhood of the borders of India. A few more flights and they can be said to be headed homeward. However, it will be some months before they cross the borders of their home country and hear the American eagle scream a greeting as they cross the Rocky mountains on the final lap to the Pacific coast whence they set out early in the spring. From the balmy breezes of California they faced the Arctic blasts along the Alaskan coast and having at length headed southward are now well within the torrid zone. After jumping off from the mainland of Europe some months hence they will again face the frigid zone as they cross a portion of Greenland. They will have experienced all varieties of climate by the time they reach California some months hence.

The late Marie Corelli on being asked why she never married said: "There is no need, for I have three pets at home which answer the same purpose as a husband—a dog which growls every morning, a parrot which swears all the afternoon, and a cat which comes home late at night."

We should recall that the county fair is less than three months off and begin preparations for it. There will be stronger competition this year, and the winners will be those who use most care in growing and choosing their exhibits.

If you get acquainted with the other fellow, you may learn that he is not such a bad man after all.

Good Things to Eat

(Rochester Times-Union)

If you like delicious things to eat, you certainly picked out the wrong generation in which to live. The cookery of centuries ago must have been exquisite, judging from the writings of some of the escatologists.

The king of Bithynia, Asia Minor, on one of his military expeditions developed a violent craving for an ocean herring. The ocean was far away. So the king's cook took a big turnip, cut it into the shape of a herring, fried it in oil, seasoned it with the powdered grains of a dozen black poppies.

The king swore it was the finest fish he ever ate.

While you've eaten many a fish that tasted as good, it illustrates the phenomenal skill of ancient cooks.

Cooking is sometimes classed as one of the lost arts.

The most famous course at banquets of rich Romans of old was hummungbird tongues, brought long distances by relays of swift sunners.

Today they'd use refrigerator cars or airplanes.

Greek chefs of several thousand years ago were able to serve a whole pig, roasted on one side and boiled on the other, so skillfully prepared that the two parts were as distinct as if cooked separately.

A race of gluttons was the natural development from this marvelous ancient cooking. A past-master of them, named Apicius, specialized on large shrimps. Hearing that the shrimps along the African coast were much larger, he actually bought a ship, made the trip, was disappointed, and returned in deep melancholy.

Philoxenus, asked what he wished most, promptly answered: "A crane's neck, so I would be longer in partaking of my meals."

Those good old days are gone. Even the traditional Sunday dinner is losing out, in the number of courses if not in taste.

People are beginning to eat scientifically, by calories—and getting the job finished as quickly as possible, gulping.

It's just as well that cookery is becoming a lost art, though, for fine cooks ruin more digestions than poor cooks, by enticing to over-eating.

RED SKINS TO BE PLACED IN SCHOOLS OVER STATE

STILLWATER, June 17.—Complimentary copies of "The Redskin" student annual of the Oklahoma A. & M. College are to be placed in the libraries of more than 100 state schools this summer, including the state university, normal schools, other colleges and high schools, it has been announced by Bradford Knapp, president of the college.

Among high schools to receive copies of the book are the following:

Miami, Vinita, Tahlequah, McAlester, Hugo, Durant, Madill, Ardmore, Tishomingo, Ada, Pauls Valley, Shawnee, Eufaula, Okemah, Okmulgee, Sapulpa, Tulsa, Pawhuska, Pawnee, Guthrie, Oklahoma City, El Reno, Kingfisher, Perry, Alva, Woodward, Ponca City, Madill, Cherokee, Fairview, Watonga, Anadarko, Lawton, Duncan, Waurika, Frederick, Altus, Hollis, Mangum, Hobart, Clinton, Cherokee, Nowata, Chickasha, Collinsville, Geary and Claremore.

add $20,000 to the sum of these four items in order to arrive at the final estimate of the gain for the four years, namely, 7,115,000.

"It appears, then, that the average gain during the last four years was 1,778,750 a year as compared with an average increase of 1,418,100 during the decade 1910 to 1920."

Captured Turkish Sword
Presented to Queen Marie
(By the Associated Press)

LONDON.—There was an interesting little incident at the Romanian Legation recently, when Queen Marie, on her visit here, was presented by Captain's Locker Lampson with a sword captured in Turkey by the unit of British naval armored cars which served in Russia and subsequently fought in the Dobruja retreat.

The sword was to have been presented to the Queen when peace was declared, but the ceremony was postponed until she could visit England officially as Queen of a restored Rumania.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THOU HAST A MIGHTY ARM; strong is thy hand, and high is thy right hand. Justice and judgment are the habitation of thy throne: mercy and truth shall go before thy face.—Psalm 80: 13, 14.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Frank Horton is to attempt to increase the membership of the Chamber of Commerce and put that most important organization in a position to render service to Okmulgee. The Chamber of Commerce is not an organization of rich men. Such an organization would probably only result in boosting selfish things. The Chamber of Commerce is or should be a most democratic organization made up of men in all walks of life who come together for the common purpose of bettering the city.

A Chamber of Commerce is not needed so much by the banks, the public service corporations, and the greater business houses as it is just for the Tom, Dick and Harrys who make up the city's population. The work of a Chamber of Commerce is to make a city a better place in which to live, a better place in which to transact business, increase employment, better housing conditions, and generally to work to the end of giving every person a square deal.

These being some of the objects of a Chamber of Commerce, it is important that the chamber be made up of rich and poor alike. We believe that every man who owns his own home in Okmulgee and every man engaged in business even though it be a small fruit stand, or shoe repair shop should, for his own interest, be a member of the Chamber of Commerce. If the city is to grow and the man's business increase, and his home become more valuable it must be through the work of the Chamber of Commerce.—Okmulgee Democrat.

Not being in possession of the evidence in Senator Wheeler's case we are not in a position to pass an opinion on his guilt or innocence, but the indictment coming at the time it does affords ample reason for a suspicion that there is a gentleman of sable hue somewhere in the woodpile. Looks very much like Daugherty's friends are trying to start a back fire that will discredit Wheeler in his efforts to find out a few things about Daugherty's record as attorney general. One thing that gives color to this suspicion is the testimony given sometime ago to the effect that secret service agents of the government had sought to find something on Senators Robinson and LaFollette which could be used to shut them up. However, the special committee that will investigate the Wheeler charges will probably throw some light on the matter.

With the evidence brought to light by the Daugherty committee during the past few days it is not hard to understand why the national prohibition law has not been enforced any too well during the past two or three years. With the department of justice (?) calling off the prosecution of the big violators, presumably when they had made satisfactory "arrangements" with the proper parties and firing agents who made an honest effort to apprehend transgressors a man does not need the 100 eyes of Argus to see how the system worked. Certainly not a very good showing for Daugherty whether he had anything to do with Teapot Dome or not.

Although European nations are clamoring for huge loans from the United States, a recent report by Secretary Hoover indicates that huge sums of foreign money are being invested in this country. The European capitalists are shy about the opportunities offered in their own countries but American capitalists are importuned to advance money to pull those nations along until something turns up. Rather curious state of affairs, to say the least.

"Know you county," advises the Ardmoreite. That is sound doctrine and the News recommends it to the citizenship of Ada. It will do much to promote a cordial understanding if the citizens of the town make it a point to take frequent trips to various rural communities and get first hand information on what is going on and learn more about the problems of the farmers.

One witness before the senate Daugherty committee testified that Jake Hamon said he spent $400,000 in putting Oklahoma in the Republican column in 1920 and now comes another who says Jake told him he would have spent $1,000,000, if necessary. To learn that they let $600,000 of easy money thus escape their clutches is enough to make a lot of his campaign workers feel like voting the socialist ticket to pay for their stupidity.

With Michigan, Nebraska and Illinois all in a week giving heavy majorities for Coolidge in Republican primaries, it may possibly be dawning on Hiram Johnson that the presidential nomination is not seeking him this year. Most men can take a hint in course of time.

It has not yet been established how much Jake Hamon actually paid out in the 1920 presidential campaign, but it is plain that Jake talked more than an astute politician should.

GEOLOGISTS TO INVADE ARCTIC

Party of Geologists Plan Hazardous Tour Into Artic Circle

(By the Associated Press)

NENANA, Alaska.—Through the bitter weather of late winter in the Arctic Circle and the peril of an unsettled, unknown region, a party of the United States Geological Survey, headed by Dr. Phillip S. Smith, is bound for the remote Colville river basin.

This probably is the most hazardous mission ever undertaken by this branch of the government service. The purpose is to fill in a big blank spot on the map of Alaska, containing 35,000 square miles of unexplored wilderness, and also to determine by mineralogical tests the scope of an oil bearing structure known to exist between Point Barrow, on the Arctic coast, and the Colville basin.

According to Gerald Fitzgerald, topographical engineer with the party, the barren stretch is uninhabited except along the Arctic shores, where isolated bands of Eskimos eke out a living by beach-combing. The country is devoid of timber, but overlain by tundra moss save where streams cut the structure and reveal coal beds and oil seepages. It is a territory calculated to test the stamina of the most hardy explorer. Fitzgerald has penetrated far enough in the direction to learn that game apparently is negligible, except for ptarmigan and an occasional colony of beaver and muskrat. Without timber, the party will be compelled to rely on exposed coal for fuel, and lacking that, on the meager supply of gasoline and alcohol they can transport.

Before leaving here, recently, Dr. Smith said he expected to come out of the wilderness by way of the Colville river to the Arctic ocean. He explained that the party would have to depend on being picked up by a stray whaling vessel and conveyed to the regular lines of steamer travel at Nome. If no whaler appears, the explorers will cast their lot with the Eskimos and live along the coast until relief is sent.

The region to be explored is believed to contain vast deposits of oil. A lake filled with bitumen has been discovered near Point Barrow and the survey party will try to determine the origin of this oil and its commercial importance.

The expedition was organized with the care of a Polar journey. No surplus was carried, either in men or materials. Dr. Smith contracted with a company to transport his supplies to the headwaters of the Alatna in the Alaskan Rockies. At this point the party is to plunge into the wilderness. Besides the dozen dog teams, knockdown canoes were taken to be assembled and used when the streams are free from ice. Dr. Smith hoped to reach the headwaters of the Colville about May 1, so that the principal explorations could be made in the brief Arctic summer.

The geologists and topographers in the party include Dr. J. B. Merle R. K. Lynn and Harry A. Tait. Four aides complete the personnel.

STILLWATER—The Oklahoma A. and M. college glee club will entertain members of the state high school glee clubs which enter singing contests at the college in connection with the state-wide inter-scholastic meet here May 1, 2 and 3. A dinner and dance will be given according to Darrell Woodard, Stillwater, president of the club.

INSURANCE DEPARTMENT TURN MONEY TO TEXT BOOKS

OKLAHOMA CITY.—The state insurance commission has turned in $130,000 to be used in the purchase of free text books, A. S. J. Shaw, state treasurer, announced Wednesday.

Insurance Commissioner James G. Redd said that collections from insurance companies to be turned to the free textbook fund would amount to about $400,000 this year.

Provision was made in the free text book bill for the appropriation of $600,000 and if only $400,000 is raised from the insurance companies the remaining $200,000 will have to be supplied from the general revenue fund.

A. FLOYD ASKS VOTERS TO CONTINUE HIS PROGRAM

Prof. A. Floyd authorizes The News to announce his candidacy for the office of County Superintendent of Schools, a position he now holds.

Mr. Floyd believes his record is such that justifies him in asking for an opportunity to continue to serve the boys and girls of the county. During his incumbency, the schools have advanced until they now rank with the best in any county in the United States. New buildings have been erected, the qualifications of the teachers have increased until almost every school is manned by the best trained teachers, school grounds have been improved and practical application of lessons have reached new levels of experience for others could do.

The candidate does not believe he is naturally any better qualified for this important position than some other teachers in the county, but he does believe that his more than a quarter of a century's experience in helping form the scholastic system of this section, his educational qualifications and his experience in the office fit him for the position to an extent that only years of experience for others could do.

A program of work has been outlined by Mr. Floyd and he has been working at it for the entire time he has been in office. He would like to have an opportunity to complete this program. When that is done, he expects to retire with the feeling that his life has been well spent and that hundreds of boys and girls in this section have been benefitted by his supervision. It is a laudable ambition, and his friends believe the people will permit him to finish the structure he has so nobly begun.

"ALL KIWANIS" BANQUET AT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

About seventy Kiwanians, their wives and guests of the evening observed the first annual "All-Kiwanis" night with a banquet for "All-Kiwanis" Charter night last evening in the banquet rooms of the Presbyterian church.

Owing to the absence of John Woodward of Tulsa, past governor of Oklahoma and Texas, the Charter night program, which was to have been held in connection with the "All-Kiwanis" night banquet, was forced to a halt. The All-Kiwanis section of the program was followed out as announced and substitutions made fittingly to complete the program of the evening.

The banquet hall, decked in gay colors of orange and green, Kiwanian colors, presented a pleasing scene for the festivities of the evening and the friendly sparring of wits concerning the "Better halves, bosses" and others who were guests of the Kiwanians for the evening.

Following the disposal of a three-course dinner served by the Ladies of the First Presbyterian church, Kiwanians were called upon to introduce their wives and guests of the evening.

Following the introduction of guests, the "All-Kiwanis" night program was observed, constituting the following out of a program simultaneously with 88,000 Kiwanians over the United States and Canada. Kiwanian songs were rendered by the banqueters and a keynote speech being delivered at the opening of the International Kiwanis convention at Denver at the exact moment of reading here was another feature of the verbatim program.

President R. T. Blackburn of the Ada Kiwanis club welcomed the Kiwanians and their guests of the evening, expressing regret that the Charter night program could not be followed out. Blackburn recited the principals upon which the Kiwanis club was founded in Ada.

J. R. Jewel of Arkansas and a guest at the College was a guest of the evening. He addressed the Kiwanians on the need of community work and of a better feeling between city and country people. Jewel announced that the mission of all worthy civic organizations should rest in the salvation of the children.

Short addresses were heard by Kiwanians and their guests by special guests of honor, including President Roy Givens of the Chamber of Commerce, President Sam A. McKeel and Secretary Robert Bradley of the Lion Club, Commander Robert S. Kerr of the Norman Howard post, American Legion, Secretary Williams of the Retail Merchants association, J. R. Jewel, Mrs. A. LONDON CAB DRIVER CLAIMS TITLE AND PRODUCTIVE ACRES

(By the Associated Press)

LONDON.—A one-legged cab driver named Benjamin Tyrrell has brought a claim before the Chancery court to a baronetcy which has been in abeyance for more than a century. Tyrrell has written to the Lord Chancellor that he can prove himself to be direct heir of John Tyrrell, third son of Sir Thomas Tyrrell, who died in 1705.

The Lord Chancellor has replied that it is doubtful whether he can recover the family estate because of the lapse of time. The estate which reverted to Chaucer covers many thousand of acres and produces a large annual revenue.

Rose Fever Tortures Banished in 24 Hours Complete Relief Positively Guaranteed — Test FREE

After eight years' intensive study of rose fever and hay fever—a study which included clinical laboratory treatment and observation of 2,000 severe cases—a real scientific treatment has at last been discovered.

There can be no question of a doubt about this marvelous new treatment. Of the 2,000 cases treated in the clinical tests, 95 per cent were completely relieved—not in weeks or days—but actually in 24 hours! Almost like magic their fearfully "funny" eyes and noses—their distressful sneezing—their depressing headaches, fever, asthma and general misery—all disappeared. And so confident is the Clinic that these amazing results will follow in practically every case that they positively guarantee relief in 24 hours or the treatment is free.

This new treatment known as RINEX is entirely different from any other treatment. No mere surface spray, ointment or inhalation which only soothes surface irritation. No mere headache or fever remedy which only makes you temporarily forget your misery. No narcotic or habit forming drugs, no bad after-effects. This wonderful new treatment is a proven example for you to direct to the cause of rose fever and hay fever—protein infection of the system from pollens—and neutralizes it completely and removes it. The result is heavenly relief in the shortest space of 24 hours.

No matter how long you have had rose fever or how severely you have suffered—RINEX will banish every single symptom—this is positively guaranteed. The regular size package costs only $1—to be returned full if it does not do the work. Be sure to get the genuine RINEX in the air tight glass flask.

But just now, through a special introductory arrangement, you can obtain a trial treatment entirely FREE.

Simply go to any of the drug stores named below and ask for a trial package of RINEX. Take the prescription for just ONE day—just TRY IT. WE KNOW it will do what we say. But here you can have free trial—if you act at once. Don't delay. Be sure to ask for our free treatment within the next three days—this offer is limited. RINEX may be obtained in this city at Wozencraft's Drug store and Gwin & Mays.

OIL PRODUCER FOUND WITH BULLET WOUND IN HEAD

(By the Associated Press)

TULSA, June 17.—Frank L. Bartlett, an oil producer who was formerly wealthy, died early today from a bullet wound in his head. He was found in a dying condition on the floor of his room in the Bartlett home early this morning and rushed to the Tulsa hospital where he died at 2 o'clock without regaining consciousness. Friends were at the bedside to question him as to the manner in which he was shot had he had a conscious moment.

J. W. BROOKS, PIONEER OF ARDMORE, DEAD

ARDMORE.—(Special)—J. W. Brooks, pioneer resident of southern Oklahoma died at Hardy Sanitarium at 9:45 o'clock Sunday night succumbing to an attack of ptomaine poisoning which he originally developed at Noconah, Texas, in 1916.

It was the third attack which he suffered. The latest attack which proved fatal began to show its effects at Hugo three weeks ago where Mr. Brooks had been inspecting a wildcat test in which he was interested.

He was brought back to his home in this city and was confined to bed since last Tuesday. At about 6 o'clock Sunday night, he complained of severe pain and was removed to the sanitarium where he breathed his last a few hours later.

LEAGUE BUREAU AIDS INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS

GENEVA.—Useful information concerning world universities is contained in the first quarterly publication of the international office of university intelligence, which was recently created as a new cooperative feature of the League of Nations.

These publications will endeavor to co-ordinate in compact form international university information and fulfill the purpose of the new office, which is that of serving as a bridge between the higher institutions of learning in all countries. They will relate the exchange of professors and students, list the books of interest to university people, and catalogue the administrative measures adopted by various universities concerning the conditions under which foreigners may follow courses of study, explain scholarships, the tuition conditions affecting foreigners and set forth the special courses which may be open to them.

The first number of the review publishes the results of an inquiry among international students' associations on an organization for the exchange of students from one country to another; the conditions under which students work abroad and questions touching university courses in general.

Under the heading "university information" appears the text of a convention of the mutual exchange of students between five countries of Central America, communications sent in by the national university offices of the United States, England, Denmark, Spain, France, Holland and Switzerland, and notices from various international associations of students.

FLOYD ADVISED MONEY FOR SCHOOLS COMING

Superintendent Floyd has been advised by the secretary of the Oklahoma Education association that a hearing will be had on June 20 on the temporary injunction recently granted to restrain the payment of the $650,000 appropriation for weak schools of the state. The secretary assures him that the association will fight the case to as speedy a conclusion as possible in order that teachers to whom the money is due may receive their warrants without undue delay.

Superintendent Nash advises that preparations are well under way to put the free text book law into effect and that the bonds which must be made by school boards of the various districts are ready. Mr. Floyd says he has already arranged this matter and others in Pontotoc county so that no delay will be experienced when the word comes to comply with the details of the act.

Fourteen Persons More Than Hundred Years, Die In State

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 17. Fourteen persons more than 100 years of age died in Oklahoma last year, according to the vital statistics bureau of the health department. One was said to have been 114 and two others more than 110.

One hundred and thirty-eight persons, whose death certificates were filed with the bureau, were between 90 and 100 years of age when they died.

Almost twice as many deaths of infants less than a year old were reported than persons between 60 and 69, the age limit in which the second highest rate of mortality was reported. There were 1,985 deaths between 60 and 69 and 3,520 of infants less than a year of age. The third largest number of deaths was between the ages of 20 and 21—1,542. SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I—Word that their nightly frolics are distasteful to a party of "high-toned Britshers" recently arrived at the Lodge, among them an army captain and his sister of the same name as himself is brought to Jack Kilmeny (known to his friends as "Crumps") and some friends camping on the Gunnison in Colorado. Called to account for the uproar by Dobyns Verinder, who is a millionaire, member of the British party, Jack finds that individual and has a friendly chat with Moya Dwight, attractive Irish girl.

CHAPTER II—Kilmeny's father, member of an old Irish family, had married a Colorado girl, now dead, between whom and her husband's family had developed a bitter feud. Jack's sympathies have been all with his mother, and he has no use for his British relatives, two of whom he knows are at the Lodge. "While fishing I may again meet Miss Dwight and by her introduction to the other members of the party which includes are Lord and Lady Farquhar, as 'Mr. Crumps,' which she has heard him called. Jack is immensely impressed by the loveliness of Joyce Seldon, companion of Moya.

CHAPTER III

Fugitives From Justice

At the Lodge the whole party was down by nine-thirty and was on the road within the hour. The horses were keen and the pace brisk. It was not until half the distance had been covered that Joyce, who was riding beside the captain, found opportunity for conversation.

"You sat up late, didn't you?"

"Early," the soldier laughed.

"How did the savage behave himself? He has a good deal of assurance, hasn't he?" she asked lightly.

The captain hesitated. "Do you think that's quite the word? He fitted in easily—wasn't shy or awkward—that sort of thing, you know—but he wasn't obtrusive at all. Farquhar likes him."

"He's rather interesting," Joyce admitted.

She thought of him as a handsome untamed young barbarian, but it was impossible for her to deny a certain amount of regard for any virile man who admired her. The westerner had not let his eyes rest often upon her, but the subtle instinct of her sex told her that he was very much taken with her. Since Joyce Seldon was the center and circumference about which most of her thoughts revolved, it followed that the young man had chosen the sure way to her favor.

Moya Dwight too found that the young fisherman fitted in and out of her mind a good deal. In spite of the soft vocal elisions of the West, his speech had a dignity that suggested breeding. It was quite likely he was not a gentleman, according to the code in which she had been brought up, but it was equally sure there burned in him that dynamic spark of self-respect which is at the base of all good manners.

The little town of Gunnison rioted with life. Born and brought up as she had been in the iron cage of modern super-civilization, Moya found the barbaric color of the occasion very appealing. As she looked down on the arena from the box her party occupied, the heart of the girl throbbed with the pure joy of it all. She loved this West, with its picturesque chap-clad brown-faced riders. They were a hard-bitten lot, burned to a brick red by the untempered sun of the Rockies. Cheerful sons of mirth they were, carrying their years with a boyish exuberance that was delightful.

Most of the competitors for the bucking broncho championship had been eliminated before the arrival of the party from the Lodge. Among the three who had reached the finals was their guest of the previous evening.

"Jack Kilmeny will ride Teddy Roosevelt," blared the megaphone man.

The English officer turned to Farquhar. "Didn't quite catch the name. Sounded like my own."

"That's what I thought," contributed his sister. "A moment later, she added: 'Why? It's Mr. Crumps.'"

That young man sauntered forward lazily, dragging his saddle by its horn. He saddled the trembling animal warily, then swung lightly to the seat. The broncho stood for an instant motionless, then humped itself from the earth, an incarnate demon of action. But the lean-flanked young miner appeared clamped to the saddle. Lithe and sinuous as a panther, he rode with a perfect ease that was captivating. Even the frontier West had never seen a more daring and magnificent piece of horsemanship.

Captain Kilmeny clapped his hands enthusiastically. "Bravo! Well done!" He turned to Moya, who sat beside him. "Finest bit of rough-riding I ever saw. Not one man in a million could have done it."

"It's all in getting the hang of the Indians of Alaska Refuge to Quite Graves of Forebears

ANCHORAGE, Alaska.—The Indians of Knik, an old settlement at the head of Cook Inlet, are in dire distress because of the ancient custom of remaining where their fathers and grandfathers died. The advent of the railroad and the increase of white men's ranches have ruined trapping in the vicinity, the Indians' means of livelihood.

Asked why they do not move to keeper of the fair association and got away with three thousand dollars. How long since they passed?

"Between a quarter and half an hour," answered Farquhar.

The sheriff nodded. "All ready, boys."

The clattering hoofs disappeared in a cloud of dust down the road.

The rough places of life had been padded for all these young women. Never before had they come so close to its raw, ugly seams. The shadow of the law, the sacredness of caste, had always guarded them.

India turned upon her brother big dilated eyes. "He said Kilmeny. Who can the man be?"

"I don't know." He was silent a moment in frowning thought, struck by an unwelcome idea. "You remember Uncle Archie. He had a son named Jack who lives somewhere in Colorado. D'ye remember he came home when you were a little kidie? Stopped at granddad's. Thought I had seen his face before. He's our cousin Jack. That's who he is."

"And now he's a highwayman. By Jove, he doesn't look it," contributed Farquhar.

"I don't believe it. Such nonsense!" flamed Moya. "There must be a mistake."

"He was troubled about something, Moya," Lord Farquhar suggested. "He and his friend were riding fast and plainly in a hurry."

" Didn't he stop to talk?"

"He had to do that to avoid suspicion. I could see his mind wasn't on what he was saying. The man was anxious."

"I thought you liked him," Moya charged scornfully.

Her guardian smiled. "I did, but that isn't evidence that will acquit him in court of a road agent."

"He's India's cousin—maybe. How could he be a criminal? Shall we have to cut her and Captain Kilmeny now?" Miss Dwight demanded hotly.

The captain laughed, but there was no mirth in his laughter. "You're a stanch friend, Miss Dwight. By Jove, I hope you're right about him."

Deep in her heart Moya was not at all sure. What did she know of him? And why should she care what he was? The man was a stranger to her. Forty-eight hours ago she had never seen him. Why was it that every good-looking vagabond with a dash of the devil in him drew on her sympathies? She recalled now that he had hesitated when she had mentioned his name, no doubt making up his mind to let her think him other than he was. The sheriff must know what he was talking about when he said the man was an outlaw. But the appearance of him pleaded potentially. Surely those clear unflinching eyes were not the homes of villainy. Nor could she find it possible to think his gallant grace of bearing the possession of a miscreant.

Before the day was out her faith in him had sunk to zero. Captain Kilmeny returned from the camp of the miners with the detailed story of the holdup.

Two masked men on horseback had robbed the treasurer of the Gunnison County Fair association as he was driving to the bank to deposit the receipts of the day. The men had not been recognized, but the description of the horses corresponded closely to those ridden by Kilmeny and Colter.

It was recalled that these two men had disappeared as soon as the bucking broncho contest was over, not half an hour before the robbery. This would allow them just time to return to the corrals on the outskirts of the town, where they had left their mounts, and to saddle so as to meet the treasurer on his way to the bank. It happened that the corral was deserted at the time, the boy in charge having left to see the finals of the contest. Cumulative evidence of guilt lay in the disappearance from the fishing camp not only of the two men suspected, but also of their companions, Curly and Mosby.

"Think he really did it, Ned?" India asked her brother.

"Can't say, sis. Looks like it," he answered gloomily.

Of the party at the Lodge only one member was pleased at the turn events had taken. Verinder's manner was as openly triumphant as he dared allow it to become. It cried offensively, "I told you so!"

CHAPTER IV

I'm Here, Neighbor."

Moya still rode afternoons with her friends, fished occasionally, and took her regular hand at bridge. But it was unaccountably true that her zest in these amusements was gone. She could give no satisfactory reason for it, but she felt as if something had passed out of her life forever. It was as if the bubbling youth in her were quenched. The outstanding quality of her had been the eagerness with which she had run out to meet new experiences. Now she found herself shrinking from them. Whenever she could the girl was glad to slip away by herself. To the charge that she was in love with this young vagabond she would have given a prompt denial. Nevertheless, Lady Farquhar recognized the symptoms as dangerous.

On the fifth day after the Gunnison trip the young people at the Lodge made a party to fish Sunbeam creek.

They followed the stream far into the hills, riding along the trail which bordered it. Kilmeny and Verinder carried lunch baskets, for they were to make a day of it and return only in time for a late dinner.

To Moya, looking around upon the little group of armed men, there was a menacing tenseness in their manner.

Her mind was groping for an explanation, but she understood this much—that the law was reaching out for the devil-may-care youth who had so interested her.

"What do you want with him? What has he done?" she cried quickly.

"He and his friend held up the gate-bucks of the pony were easy to foresee. Presently they ceased. The horse stood with drooping head, foam dripping from its mouth, flanks flecked with sweat stains.

Kilmeny swung from the saddle, and at the same time Colter stepped into the arena. He drew Jack aside and whispered in his ear. India, watching the rough-riders through field glasses, saw the face of the young man grow grim and hard. Without the delay of a moment he pushed through the crowd that gathered to congratulate him and walked out of the grounds with Colter.

The other two riders who had reached the finals were both experts in the saddle. One of them, however, had been traveling with a Wild West show and was too soft to hold his own against the bit of incarnate deviltry he was astride. To save himself, he had to clutch at the horn of the saddle.

"He's pulling leather," shouted one of the judges, and the man was waved aside.

The third cowpuncher made a good showing, but his horse lacked the energy and spirit of Teddy Roosevelt. The unanimous decision of the judges was in favor of Kilmeny. But when they sought for him to award the prize the new champion was nowhere to be found.

Moya Dwight felt with genuine disappointment that the man's courtesy had failed. She and her friends had applauded his exploits liberally. The least he could have done would have been to have made a short call at their box. Instead, he had ignored them. She resolved to bear herself more coldly if they met again.

The early shadows of sunset were stretching down the rough mountain sides by the time the visitors from the Lodge reached the river canyon on their homeward way. Soon after this the champion rider and his friend Colter passed them on a stretch of narrow road cut in the steep wall of the gulch. The leathery face of the latter took them in impassively as he gave them a little nod of recognition, but the younger man relined in for a few words. He accepted their congratulations with a quiet "Glad you enjoyed it," but it was plain that he was in a hurry. In his eyes there was a certain hardiness that seemed hardly to fit the occasion. Moya could not avoid the impression that he was anxious about something. As soon as he well could he put spurs to his horse and cantered after his companion.

It was perhaps a quarter of an hour later that the sound of hard riding reached them from the rear. Five dusty, hard-bitten men, all armed with rifles and revolvers, drew level with them. The leader threw a crisp question at Lord Farquhar.

"Two riders pass you lately?"

"Yes."

"Say anything?"

"The younger one stopped for a few words. He is a Mr. Crumps, camped on the river just below us."

The lank man with the rifle across his saddle how laughed grimly. "Yes, he is—not. His name is Kilmeny. I'm the sheriff of Gunnison county—and I want him bad."

"Did you say Kilmeny?" asked the captain sharply.

"That's what I said—the man that won the broncho-busting contest today."

Captain Kilmeny clapped his hands enthusiastically. "Bravo! Well done!" He turned to Moya, who sat beside him. "Finest bit of rough-riding I ever saw. Not one man in a million could have done it."

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 17.—With the dedication of the World War veterans ward at the Central State hospital at Norman, the $1,000,000 program for state soldier relief mapped out by the legion several years ago virtually is finished, according to officials of the Oklahoma department. All that remains is the completion of the recreation hall at the Muskogee hospital, at a cost of $20,000. Horace H. Hagan, secretary of the soldiers relief commission said.

Funds for the legion plan were voted by the Eighth and Ninth legislatures and under the supervision of the soldiers relief commission, created by the Eighth legislature, the work was carried out. The relief commission is made up of the following: Ray O. Weems, Oklahoma City, chairman; Charles L. Orr, Holdenville and Horace H. Hagan, Tulsa, secretary.

The legion program, mapped out shortly after the war, included the construction of a general hospital at Muskogee, a tuberculosis sanitarium at Sulphur, wards at Norman and the University hospital at Oklahoma City.

J. William Cordell, department adjutant, has been advised that negotiations for the purchase of the Muskogee hospital by the Veterans bureau will be inaugurated at once. The authorization for the purchase of the institution was contained in the Langley-Gerald bill, signed by the president shortly before congress adjourned. It is understood by legion officials that $500,000 is the offer the government will make to state representatives.

The government has declared war on "back pay scalpers," the state department has been advised, urging co-operation of legionnaires. Attempts to buy up for cash at But as soon as the rest were out of sight she sat down in a shady spot and fell to musing.

The voice of a grizzled rider startled her from her dreams. Her lifted eyes took in the grim look of the man, garnished with weapons ready to his hands.

"Morning, miss," he nodded amiably.

"Good-morning." And swift on the heels of it, "You are a deputy sheriff, are you not?"

"Ring the bell, ma'am. You belong to the English outfit, I reckon. Funny about some members of your crowd having the same name as the man we're looking for."

"Mr. Kilmeny, you mean?"

"Jack Kilmeny! Yes, ma'am. Came from the old country, his father didn't know of some big gun over there. Likely he's some kin to your friends."

He put the last observation as a question, with a sharp glance from under his heavy gray eyebrows. Moya chose to regard it as a statement.

"Are you still searching for him?" she asked.

"You bet we are. The sheriff's got a notion he's up in these hills somewhere. But if you ask me, I'd say he was busy losing himself way off in Routt county, clear of the map. He used to punch cows up there and he knows all kinds of holes to hide in."

"Yes," Moya assented listlessly.

"He had his getaway all planned before ever he came down here. That's a cinch. The fishing was all a bluff. The four of them had the hold-up arranged weeks ago."

"Don't you think there's a chance he didn't do it?" she asked in a forlorn way.

"Not a chance. Jack Kilmeny and Colter pulled off the play. What the others had to do with it I don't know."

The deputy passed to the fishing in his conversation, hoped she would have luck, stroked his white goatee, and presently departed.

The man had scarcely disappeared around a bend in the gulch before a sound started her. Moya turned quickly to see a man drop down the face of a large rock to the ground. Even before he turned she recognized that pantherine grace and her heart lost a beat.

He came straight toward her, with the smile in his blue eyes that claimed comradeship as a matter of course.

"You—here," she gasped.

"I'm here, neighbor. Where ought I to be—in Routt county losing myself?"

Her little hand was lost in his big brown fist, her gaze locked in his.

"You heard him?"

"Couldn't help it. I was working down through that grove of pines to the river when I saw him."

"He may come back."

"I reckon not. Let's sit down and talk."

ROTARIANS GATHER TO PROMOTE GOOD-WILL

TORONTO, Ont., June 17.—To promote understanding good-will and international peace through a world fellowship of business and professional men 10,000 Rotarians are gathered here from all sections of the civilized world for the 15th annual convention of Rotary International to be called to order at Exposition Park tomorrow morning.

This is the first convention of Rotary International that has ever been held in Canada and the second ever held outside the United States the Rotarians having met in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1921.

The convention will continue in session four days and will end with the election of officers on Friday. Former Governor Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, will be one of the chief speakers. Reports will be made on the progress of the work of developing codes of ethical practices in business and professions through the influence of Rotarian members of national, international, state and provincial trade and professional associations. Work among boys and crippled children and problems of Rotary club administration will be discussed.

A president and eight directors will be elected, a new administration coming in to Rotary every year. The leading candidates for president are Everett W. Hill of Oklahoma City, as present first vice president; Harry Bert Cradick of Minneapolis and Frank H. Lamb of Hoquiam, Washington. Chicago, Cleveland and Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, are the leading cities bidding for the next convention.

Prohibition in Finland.

HELSINKI—Several members of the Finnish Diet have jointly introduced a bill which, if adopted, would drastically revise the prohibition law which is alleged to have failed entirely in its purpose. It is probable that the bill will be rejected, however, as the principle of prohibition is still officially adhered to by most of the political parties in spite of the measure's alleged disadvantages.

To Save a Soul Was Sandy's Idea

By JOHN PALMER

(© 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"WHO might you be?"

Sandy McGregor stood in the doorway of his shack, looking keenly down at the trembling boy within. Tall, grizzled, the epitome of strength was Sandy, the occupant of the lonely shack in the desert, twenty miles from Sunrise.

"For two years he had been doggedly washing gold from the stream, always in hope of the great strike which he had never made.

Every one in Sunrise respected the gaunt, God-fearing old Scotchman, whose word was his bond.

Sandy looked at the boy. "Ye be Alex Smith?"

"Yes, I'm Alex Smith," faltered the other. "You know about me. I shot and killed John Templeton. He cheated me out of my wages and discharged me from his livery stable."

"Aye, I know about that crime," answered Sandy.

"I didn't mean to shoot him. I'd been trying out a gun and I-I lost my head. I pulled it and fired. He fell dead. I've been hiding for a week. Won't you protect me till the posse thinks I've got away?"

"I'll protect ye," answered Sandy.

He let the boy bunk in his cabin, and took him into the hills with him the next day, where he would be safe from visitors. He made him up a bunk in the little shack he had erected in the gully. No one would come that way.

Days passed. Alex worked with a will for his employer. At the end of a week he went to him.

"I guess the posse's given up the job," he said. "I'd better be hiking."

"Whaur d'you think of going?" asked Sandy.

"Over the hills. I can strike the railroad in four days, hop a freight and—"

"And live all your days with the charge of murder hanging over ye, a hunted fugitive?" asked Sandy. "Man, go down on your knees and ask Him to give ye the strength to go back and take your medicine!"

"Back to Sunrise?" whimpered Alex. "You—you're not going to give me up?"

"I'm not going to give ye up, but I want ye to give yersel' up, Alex. A man reaps whaur he sows. 'Tis this law. Give yersel' up and trust to His mercies."

"I daren't," whimpered the boy. "They'll hang me."

"On yer knees!" said Sandy.

He kneeled beside him. "O Lord," he prayed, "as thou hast given strength to the desert and the everlasting hills, give strength now to this thy servant that he may do what is right and surrender himself to the sheriff."

Then ensued a dogged battle between the old man and the boy. For two days they fought it out together.

"If you go, you'll have ye life and freedom," said Sandy. "But ye'll live yer life knowing you've committed the sin of murder. Ye'll never know that peace of the soul that comes from well doin'. Give yersel' up and trust in Him."

In the middle of the third night Alex slipped quietly from his bunk, gathered his few things together, and crept out of the hut. He glanced fearfully at big Sandy as he passed his bed. He did not see that the big Scot was observing him through his half-closed lids.

When he was gone, Sandy went down on his knees and prayed that strength might be given to the lad. He prayed till morning—for Alex, for himself, and for the world.

When he returned from work that night Alex was in the hut.

"I—I've come back," faltered the lad. "I—I thought I could get away with it, but it was as if a voice was whispering in my ear, telling me to return. I'm ready to start for Sunrise in the morning."

"Glory be!" said big Sandy.

He clapped his hand on Alex's shoulder. "There'll be no need for you to start for Sunrise, son," he said.

He drew a folded newspaper from his pocket and handed it to him. Alex read with terror and amazement the story of his crime.

The bullet had glanced off one of Templeton's ribs, inflicting only a trivial wound. After a perfunctory search the posse had returned.

"You—knew?" gasped Alex. "Why did you?"

"To save your soul, laddie!" answered big Sandy. "Laddie, down on yer knees!"

New Universal Language

An employee of the State department has evolved a universal tongue known as "Euphony." Knowing 30 languages, he has borrowed their advantages and rejected their faults in producing a simple fundamental construction based on 15,000 root words. For every meaning or thought there is a particular word. He explains: "Euphony is something like mathematics. Take the word 'ole' for 'eye,' 'zu' meaning 'blue' and 'fra' from German meaning 'woman.' Combining them thus, 'frazole,' dropping the 'u' in 'zu' for euphony, and you have a woman blue of eye, or a blue-eyed woman. Euphony can be expanded and glorified for literature or contracted and simplified for commerce, he claims."

ESTABLISHMENT OF FELLOWSHIP ON WORLD SCALE IS DESTINY OF ROTARY, PRESIDENT TELLS THEM

(By the Associated Press)

TORONTO, June 17.—Rotary's destiny is the establishment of a world fellowship of business and professional men, united in the Rotary idea of service," said President Guy Gundaker opening the 15th annual Rotary Convention here today.

"A world fellowship, while necessarily contingent on the extent and successful establishment of Rotary in all the nations of the world, is likewise contingent on the correctness of the standards of business practice of the men privileged to enter that fellowship," he continued.

"Until men meet on the common ground of correct business methods, there can be no world fellowship of business men. The major Rotary activity for the immediate future will be an interesting and unceasing activity for better business methods and their standardization in codes of ethics. In countries where crafts are organized with great national associations, the greatest achievement will be found in Rotary's campaign for written codes of correct standards of business practice.

"In my opinion, Rotary's most lasting contribution to the world will be found in the realm of business, in the making of a happier, more contented, more kindly, more cooperative, and more honorable business world. In the achievement of a more honorable business world, you have the solution for all the other betterments sought. With an honorable business world, happiness, contentment, kindness and cooperation must and will prevail.

"With correct business methods, world-wide, the business men of all nations, meeting on this common ground, will establish great international friendship and good-will—friendship which will harbinger everlasting peace.

"One of the ultimate objects of written codes is to standardize conduct so that all fellowcraftsmen in any line of business can compete with one another on an equality of opportunity. Where men compete on different business standards, there is no equality of opportunity.

"Likewise, competition between men of different standards of business methods is unfair competition.

Standardization of right conduct will destroy unfair competition, and written codes of rules of conduct will provide the only way for such standardization. When business men compete on a common ground of high business standards, sales will be made on the basis of service, and then that paradox of the imagination—cooperative competition will be a reality.

"The greatest contribution made by Rotary in its code campaign is the insistence that codes must be made up of rules of conduct expressed as 'Shall' or 'Shall Not.'

Those codes not written as rules of conduct, nor expressed as 'shall' or 'Shall Not' fail to accomplish the purpose for which they were written; namely the standardization of conduct.

"Of the 51 codes adopted since the start of Rotary's campaign for codes, 27 of which are the codes of great national organizations, a careful estimate indicates that 200,000 men unassosciat wo-m'lly so'oh 000 business men, unassociated with Rotary are now working under adequate codes which direct them in ethical conduct. This is a greater practical demonstration of the result secured by Rotarians as ambassadors to their crafts, and also a conclusive proof of the leavening effect of Rotary upon the whole business world.

"Ethical conduct of business, emphasized and spread throughout the world, will greatly diminish the inclination and disposition on the part of the peoples of the different nations to fight one another. Unscrupulous business methods have been a potent cause of many international misunderstandings, and war has frequently sprung from unethical business manipulations and desire for monopolistic control. It is an evil, and great z zzbzbz a historical fact that nations are born, and great wars have happened through the use of business as a pawn in the world's game of chess.

History shows that governments follow the same path as business; if business is crooked, government will be crooked. If business is honest, (which Rotary's campaign for better business ethics aims to make it) it has a corresponding reaction upon the character of government.

"When the Rotary campaign for ethical business conduct spreads and is accepted, and is of world-wide recognition and enforcement, one of the greatest and most serious hidden underlying causes of jealousy and war will have been permanently removed."

NEWS NOTES FROM MOVIELAND

To keep up with a reputation of being a combination of Marguerite Clark and Lillian Gish in appearance, the champion tango, fox trot, waltz and one-stepper of Europe, also an expert swimmer, is something of a job for one young lady, but when you add to these responsibilities that of a "perfectly good" little actress of the screen—one fast acquiring an international reputation at that—you must admit any one would have her hands full.

All of these things is Miss Flora Le Breton, formerly of deah ol' England, now of these United States. She hails from the isle of Jersey and Le Breton is her real name. She came to this country last December and was immediately engaged to go to Florida with Lois Wilson and Holmes Herbert to play the second feminine role in "Another Scandal."

Coming back to New York from Florida Flora was engaged for "I am the Man," a picture in which Lionel Barrymore, Seena Owen, Joe Striker and Gaston Glass appear. In addition to this, two of the pictures in which she starred abroad will be released in this country in the very near future. They are, "I Will Repay," and "A Soul's Awakening."

What do you think of our justly celebrated comedy film star and director, Charlie Chaplin, essaying the role of Peter Pan in Barrile's inimitable story? Cosmo Hamilton, Sir Phillip Gibbs' brother, and author of note, wired Charlie the other day suggesting that he play the part. At first thought one is rather staggered by the suggestion, but after thinking it over we have come to the conclusion that we would like to see him do it. Charlie is eternally youthful and joyous too, with just the wistful joyousness that Peter embodied. It is said, on the other hand, that Mary Pickford has been chosen for the role and will commence work on it in November.

Japan Strives to Educate the Young Men of Korea

SEOUL, Korea.—The University of Seoul, founded by the Japanese government of Korea, was opened here recently. The new university, to which it is intended to give a standing equal to that of the Imperial Universities of Japan proper, will admit both Korean and Japanese students.

Its purpose, according to the Japanese authorities, is to educate Koreans in the higher branches of learning so as to fit them to take part in the administrative, legislative and judicial functions of the government of their own country.

Chapel was held this morning at 11:00 o'clock. The program consisted of a song by the assembly led by Miss Donaldson, a duet by Miss Callis and Mr. Parker.

Dr. J. R. Jewell of the University of Arkansas delivered a lecture. Dr. Jewell is one of the outstanding educators of the time. His subject was project teaching. He contrasted the method used in his childhood with that of today. Showing the difference in the results. He praises the project method very highly as it teaches the child to meet whomsoever he may need to, to gain the information he needs. Therefore he gets the lesson most vital in life, the association with others.

Moslems Turn to Grape Juice Freed of Alcoholic Content

JERUSALEM.—Wine growing in Palestine, an industry which was revived in 1882, has had a relatively bad year. The receipts are $110,000 less than they were three years ago. Two markets have been lost, the United States and Russia, but it is hoped the latter will come back.

Salt Lake City, Mo., has more electric ovens in proportion to its size than any other city in the world.

Farmers' Column

By Byron Norrell

Having used fish oil soap for three years in ridding fruit trees of borers, Mrs. Norrell is thoroughly convinced that is the real stuff. It may be applied in the form of suds, but the easiest way is to clear the gum out of the hole made by the borer and stuff it full of this soap. Generally one application will do the work, but two is certain to get the pest.

Fighting Codling Moth

Stillwater, Okla.—Thus far this season the codling moth has failed to develop sufficiently in Oklahoma to do any appreciable damage in orchards, but ravages by the pest later are to be expected unless proper spraying is done, says Prof. C. E. Sanborn, entomologist at Oklahoma A. and M. college.

Data compiled by the entomology department, at the request of fruit growers of the state, indicates that the present first brood of the codling moth will issue as adult moths about June 29 and lay eggs which will hatch into larvae about July 4," Professor Sanborn says.

"Earlier in the year, it was announced that the date would be approximately June 25, but cool weather seemed to delay development. Consequently, it will be well to spray about July 1.

"An advisable spray can be made by dissolving two pounds of lead arsenate paste or one and one-half pounds of powdered lead arsenate in fifty gallons of water. This solution should be properly applied with a good spray pump properly equipped, so that an even coating of the fluid may be brought in contact with all parts of the tree above ground.

"Ordinarily a bordeaux nozzle is advisable for applying the calyx spray, but I consider the disc type of nozzle to be the most practical for the present and later application."

Sweet Clover for Soil Building

Sweet clover is about to displace the old standby, red clover, in the Middle West. Reports from Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and the Great Lake States favor sweet clover over other kinds as a soil builder and as a forage and pasture.

Getting a stand has been one of the problems in many sections, but when once established this clover becomes one of the staple crops. Many farmers have found it necessary to lime their soil and some have found inoculation essential, but results seem to justify the extra trouble. One Iowa farmer reports that sweet clover came up in his corn field. He killed part of it out, but failed to get over the entire field. Much to his surprise, his corn produced best in the section where the sweet clover was permitted to grow.

Many farmers are having success with sweet clover in Texas and other Southwestern States. Some have trouble in getting a stand. A few have made the mistake in trying to start it in sour land, or in fields where root rot has taken hold. As this clover is a legume, it will not do well where other legumes have failed. Sweet clover requires sweet soil.

At the Texas experiment station near Denton it has been demonstrated that sweet clover seed must not be drilled in deeply. Shallow plantings seem to be more certain than when drilled in two inches or more. Sometimes broadcasting without any attempt to harrow the seed in results in a good stand. Thus far experiments in Texas have not resulted in any definite information which will insure a stand. Sometimes a good stand is secured one way and sometimes another and frequently from two to three sowings are necessary before satisfactory results are secured. Much depends upon the weather, the purity of the seed and condition of the soil.

Notwithstanding the fact that many who have tried sweet clover have not always succeeded in getting a desired stand, the crop is becoming more popular in every section of the Southwest. Those who have tried and failed and tried again with more success claim to be amply paid for their trouble, and one success leads to another. As a soil builder it
